

The Washington Post

Everything you need to know about traveling to Italy

By Nathan Diller

Updated May 17, 2022 at 10:36 a.m. EDT | Published September 1, 2021 at 5:35 p.m. EDT

If you're thinking about visiting this summer, here's what you need to know before you go.

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/travel/tips/italy-travel-restrictions-us-covid/>

How to dine and explore

Those who want to dine out in Italy should make a reservation. (Remo Casilli/Reuters)

You may have competition finding a seat, room, ticket or beach chair this summer. Simone Amorico, CEO of the private tour operator Access Italy, estimates that his company's bookings are up about 40 percent from 2019.

He advised travelers to plan ahead by booking hotels and activities two months in advance. "I mean, the sooner the better, but two months is a good bracket," he said.

Even so, Amorico said, during a visit to Rome's Colosseum last week, he noticed shorter lines now that guests do not need to present a Green Pass.